

Period Promise is a campaign designed to build on the successes of United Way's involvement with the Tampon Tuesday period product collection drive – an effort in partnership with the Labour Community to bring attention to the need for making menstrual products more accessible to and affordable for those living in poverty or with other barriers.

period.
promise

A United Way campaign.
Taking action, providing product.

There is a global movement toward menstrual equity: Ensuring menstrual hygiene products are affordable, safe and available, especially to those in need. United Way Halton & Hamilton recognizes and supports the need for menstrual equity in our own communities. Period Promise is devoted to making fundamental change so that we can eradicate period poverty in our communities. Part of that includes working with governments, businesses, unions, and other organizations to move the dial and change policy.

USW 1005 is Proud to support and Partner with the United Way to support vulnerable people in our community. You too can show your support by either financial donation or dropping off products tampons, pads and other menstrual products at USW 1005 Union Hall located at 350 Kenilworth Ave, North, Hamilton.
